of the French force, it does not follow that England and France were on the brink of war. The incident merely emphasizes the necessity for an agreement respecting the two spheres of influence, and one will be made in due time. Mr. Chamberlain has been reported to be most persistent and uncompromising in supporting the claims of the British West African Colonies, but his fine tribute to France in his admirable address on "Patriotism" at Glasgow University proves that even he can be conciliatory. Certainly French enthusiasts have the same right to dream of an African Empire, from Senegal to the Soudan, as Cecil Rhodes and his English admirers have to forecast a greater British Africa, stretching from Cape Town to Alexandria, with Khartoum as the capital; but practical statesmen, like Lord Salisbury and M. Hanotaux, will not allow two great nations to be dragged into war by dreamers, when spheres of action can be diplomatically defined and ar-

"The Spectator" predicts to-day that the first shot fired among civilized States will be between America and Spain. This opinion is not based or yesterday's flurry in Wall Street, but on a carefully reasoned argument that compromise on the basis of autonomy is now impossible in Cuba, and that the Madrid Government is alarmed by Carlist reproaches and the frightful mortality of the troops in the island, and that it is clearly in the interest of the monarchy to lose the colonies but to save its honor in a fereign war with a powerful State, rather than to confess its incompetence to suppress a rebellion of undrilled insurgents. This article refers to President Mc-Kinley as a man with the strength of will which is so rarely wanting ir. Americans who come to the front. Indeed, the tone of the English press is becoming more just to America on the Cuban question than it has been. Mr. Richard Harding Davis's book on Cuba has been read by editors, if not by the general public here, and has produced a marked effect. Nevertheless, work on Spanish ships is not suspended in English yards, and the efforts of the Madrid Government to purchase new war vessels are likely to be baffled mainly by the difficulty of finding money for them.

The comments of the daily press on the New-York election are repeated to-day by all the weekly journals, the conclusion reached being that Platt played into the hands of Croker, and that Tammany's triumph has strengthened everywhere the opponents of liberty and selfgovernment. Nearly all the English critics assume that Bryanism has gained ground by the elections of the off-year. This generally accepted idea will naturally influence British investors whenever American stocks take an upward leap. Nothing would do more to restore confidence abroad in the future of America than the adoption by the next session of Congress of a practical measure of currency reform. A definite provision for the cancellation of notes when redeemed would be regarded as a long step in the

The agreement of the conference on pelagic aling and the reports that Sir Julian Pauncefote is empowered to conclude a reciprocity treaty with the British West Indies have passed without comment here. Minister Hitchcock has passed through London this week on his way to St. Petersburg.

The stately funeral of the Duchess of Teck at Windsor was accompanied not only by an impressive memorial service in London, but also by a remarkable display of popular sympathy. Black was the chief color seen in the streets, the shops were generally draped and flags lowered, and even cabmen and omnibus drivers had tags of crape on their whips. In St. George's chapel at funerals was adopted, the Prince of Wales, Lord Salisbury and all the princes appearing in evening dress, with black gloves. The period of court mourning will be unusually short. The Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha has arrived for five weeks on a visit to Sandringham, Windsor and

The historical church of St. Martins-in-the-Fields has been completely renovated and greatly improved with the large fund obtained from the Jubilee stands, and will be reopened with a Masonic service to-morrow. Arrangements for the acquisition of property in Parliament-st. are nearly completed, and the approaches to the Houses of Parliament from Whitehall will speedily be widened. Another great improvement will be proposed at the meeting of the London County Council next week. This is the continuation of the Thames Embankment from the Houses of Parliament to Lambeth Bridge. It would be expensive, for while the buildings are shabby, riverside wharf property is valu-

The opening of the State Gallery has directed attention to this neglected section of the metropolis. The private art galleries in Pall Mall and Haymarket are now filled with new and old pictures. Noticeable among them is Munkacsy's "Old Mother's Song," several fine Gérômes and other French pictures, and three lovely Romneys. A charming collection of fiftyfour paintings and water-color drawings by Josef Israels is now on exhibition at the Goupil Gallery. The subjects are simple scenes of village and coast life in Holland, with fishermen in boats, children playing along the shore, women and easy movement a bird.

There is another measure to which tens of thousands of women are keeping step. It is a slow and solemn measure, and is the "Dance of Death." The woman who fails to take proper care of herself in a womanly way is keeping step to this measure and is unfitted for wifehood and motherhood, and doomed to an early grave or to a life of suffering. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best of all medicines for ailing women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs of femininity and makes them strong, healthy and vigorous. It allays inflammation, heals ulceration, soothes pain and gives rest to the tortured nerves. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. It banishes the squeamishness of the period of suspense and makes the little stranger's advent easy and almost painless. It insures baby's health and an ample supply of nourishment. It has transformed thousands of nervous, sickly, fretful women into healthy, happy wives and competent mothers. It sends the blood, dancing to the quick-step of health, through the veins of maid, wife and mother. All good druggists sell it, and will not offer a substitute for the sake of extra profit.

working by the fireside or waiting at the oper windows for loved ones; but dull though the skies may be and humble and dingy as are the cottages, the realism of this sympathetic painter of the joys and sorrows of poverty is always marvellous.

An astonishing practical joke was played last night at Steinway Hall, at the concert of Mrs. Plowitz Cavour, who sings Schubert's and Schumann's songs with a sympathetic voice of rare sweetness. The chief novelty of the concert was a so-called "cantillation" by Ffrangcon Davies, the fine barytone, who has been heard in America. It was a recitation of the story of the faithful soul, with a plane accompaniment by the composer of the musical setting, and with an organ obligato. At a dramatic moment of the recital, when Mr. Davies was describing to slow music the wailing soul in purgatory and pointing to the right, a huge effigy of him, wth a leering face and an insulting inscription, suddenly rose like a jack-in-thebox above the screen in line with the stage. He could not see it, but the audience did, and first tittered, then roared with laughter until the planist fled in dismay and the organist stopped playing. Mr Davies was equal to the emergency. Walking to the side of the stage, inspected the effigy gravely, then commanded silence and rebuked the audience for its discourtesy and bad manners. Great excitement followed, but after a gentleman from the audience had upset the effigy and repeated calls had been made for the completion of the programme, Mr. Davies started afresh and was received with tumultuous enthusiasm. It was as grim a Guy Fawkes prank as was ever played in London. I. N. F.

BRITISH MOVEMENTS IN AFRICA.

THE NILE EXPEDITION ABANDONED-ACTIVITY AGAINST FRENCH AGGRESSION

London, Nov. 6 .- "On the Brink" is the editorial caption under which "The Daily News" to-day discusses the Anglo-French relations, and wonders now many times of recent years Great Britain has been upon the brink of war with France. The same feeling is known to exist among the wellinformed in both countries. The news from Lagos, West Coast of Africa, on Thursday last, that the French had evacuated Sakl, one of the posts in the Lagos Hinterland which had been occupied by the troops in contravention of the agreement of 1889, leaving that place so soon as the British force sent there by Governor MacCallum appeared near Saki, shows how serious the situation in West Africa has been, and demonstrates that a collision between the French and British troops in this instance was only averted by the retirement of the former, and it further shows that such a collision may occur any day.

tian campaign up the Nile has been abandoned for the present, although expected, has been the signal for a howl of disgust similar in tone to the outburst of "The Morning Post" yesterday, which paper, in a specially displayed editorial on the subect, denounced the Government for "its hesitancy and invertebrateness on all great occasions," add ing that the "unfortunate losses in money and blood are due to procrastination and, now when the hour is ripe to vindicate Gordon and to smash the Mahdi, nothing is to be done, but a baneful hesitation sets in, a moral influenza, which paralyzes our statesmen and is the curse of constitutional government." Similar denouncements have been heard even from the most ardent supporters of the Ministry. The latter's decision not to con-tinue the Soudan campaign is attributed both to lack of money and to the impossibility of finding British troops for this service until the Indian troubles are over. Any suggestion that the Egyption troops have already broken the Khalifa's back and are capable of reaching Khartoum alone is frowned down, until it is beginning to be whis pered that the British are afraid to let the Egyptians know how much they are capable of accom-plishing alone. In any case, whatever the reason plishing alone. In any case, whatever the reason for stopping the campaign may be, it seems to be folly, bordering on madness, to wait until next year to accomplish what could now, seemingly, be so easily realized while the Dervishes and other tribes already rescued from the tyranny of the Khalifa are ready to help, indeed, the fact that further complications are threatened would seem to emphasize the advisability of hastening the recapture of the Soudan. There is no doubt that British supremacy in Central Africa is seriously threatened by the French, whose unmistakable linention is to draw a horizontal line across the Soudan and cut off direct communication between Egypt and the British possessions in the centre and south of Africa, and the knowledge that Great Britain is resting on her oars will cause them to redouble their energies. The Marquis of Salisbury is urged o, all sides to take spirited action, and it is insisted that if funds are lacking Great Britain must a lyance them, or even supply the Amount requisite to reach Khartoum.

While the Ministry is apparently vacillating in this direction, it is showing no lack of energy in a trance them, or even supply the amount requisite to reach Khartoum.

While the Ministry is apparently vaciliating in this direction, it is showing no lack of energy in the dispute with the French regarding the Lagos Hinterland. The Foreign and Colonial offices are most busily at work, and are closely following every detail of the movements made. A special map is sent to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Joseph Chamberiain, every night, with the latest moves marked on it with little flags.

The news from Sakl and elsewhere shows that the British Governors in West Africa are determined to stop any further French aggression. Immediately after the occupation of Sakl became known at the British Foreign Office, the Marquis of Salisbury sent a strongly worded dispatch to the French Foreign Office, saying that if a conflict occurred the responsibility would rest with France, and he also cabled Governor MacCallum to instruct the officers of the British expedition sent to that place not to allow anything to prevent the reoccupation of any British territories trespassed on by the French troops on the approach of the British force. A statement made by the Parliamentary Secretary of the Colonial Office, the Karl of Selbourne, yesterday, that the Government's policy, as soon to be carried out, will have the effect of opening the British Niger Company's territories to all trades, shows the Government intends to take over these territories.

Athens, Nov. 6.-Threats have been made by M. Delyannis and his supporters that they will at-tempt to overthrow the Cabinet at the first op-portunity that offers after the reassembling of the Boule. The Government seems to be assured of a majority of all the Parliamentary groups, except the Delyannists, who are pledged to co-operate in the solution of the national crisis. ENTERTAINING THE EMPEROR.—Emperor William spent the fore part of the week at Liebenberg, the estate of the Eulenbergs, where he was splendidly entertained by Count Philip von Eulenberg, who has for a long time past been a great favorite of His Majesty. On Monday, after their return from the hunt, there was a banquet, at which an invisible choir of youthful voices sang one after the other, the songs composed by the Emperor, with a text written by his host. A string orchestra of picked performers, specially sent from Berlin, furnished a low accompanment. The Em-peror was in great spirits, and proposed a toast in

The Emperor and Empress, on Wednesday, attended the annual St. Hubertus Hunt, in the Grünewald, During the afternon a big wild boar, after having been hunted for over an hour, and having swam through the lake in the forest, was approached by a group of riders, among whom were Their Malesties. The animal, having spent its strength, clumsily rolled about the ground, and finally rolled under the hoofs of the Emperor's horse, which thereupon boiled. His Malesty, however, finally stopped his steed, dismounted and speared the boar.

A church, which will be dedicated on Monday at Wilmersdorf, a suburb of this city, has been built after the plans of the royal architect, considerably modified by the Emperor. In fact, the architect admits that nearly every plan submitted to His Majesty is largely changed.

It also blames the Ministers and the higher classes for their reactionary views and lack of constitutional moderation. The book has started a storm of press criticism, commendatory and adverse. "There could be no doubt of that," he added, "if the same conciliatory disposition existed at Washington as exists upon the part of Germany."

MEETING ABANDONED. The big meeting A MEETING ABANDONED.—The big meeting which is to be held on Friday next in this city to express sympathy with the German minority in the Austrian Parliament gave the Berlin Government much uneasiness. It was feared the meeting would give offence to Austria, as the Austrian delegates who were announced as among those who would address the meeting belong to the most violent leaders. The police probabiled the Austrian Deputies from speaking and the meeting was abandoned.

CRIME IN THE EAST END.-The recent police records of the East End of London read like the old days of Deadwood, Dak. Revolver shoot ings have occurred almost dally, and on Wednesday there were no less than four committals to trial. One was the case of a boy who had killed a girl; another was that of a youth who seriously wounded a woman; in a third a man shot his mistress, and the fourth episode was that of a boy who discharged a revolver in the pit of a music hall. Earlier in the week a boy of affect was shot by a gang of youngsters because he refused to fight, and on Monday a builet crashed through a watchmaker's store, narrowly missing the proprietor. The Royal Free Hospital recently had ten patients suffering from builet wounds. In short, the possession of revolvers is now so common in the East End that residents of that district appeal daily to the magistrates and police for the adoption of measures to put an end to this lawlessness. another was that of a youth who seriously wound

GRABBING IN INDIA.-In spite of the statement made by A. J. Balfour, the First Lord of the Treasury, in his speech at Norwich on Thursday evening, that the Government had no desire of aggression on the northwest frontier of India, but sought only to maintain the present frontier, there sought only to maintain the present fronter, there is little doubt that the trial made by the punitive expeditions now engaged with the tribesmen will be followed by the usual policy of grait. The military despots of India demand and public opinion in Great Britain manifestly favors a permanent military occupation of the territory practically conquered by the British troops.

NEW BIOGRAPHY OF THE QUEEN .- A new ography of Queen Victoria, written by Richard Holmes, F. S. A., the Queen's Librarian at Windsor, appeared on Friday, and is attracting much attention. It was prepared under the immediate supervision of Her Majesty, abounds in family incidents, shows the Queen has never entirely abandoned the relaxations of her earlier years, and points out that within the last fifteen years she has sung with Tostl and has taken drawing lessons from Leitch. The biography gives among other matter an extract from Her Majesty's journal in 1855, describing her pilgrim age to the Invalides during her State visit to Paris.

It reads:

I stood at the arm of Napoleon III, his nephew, before the coffin of England's bitterest foe. I, the granddaughter of that King who hated him most and who most vigorously opposed him, and this very nephew who bears his name being my nearest and dearest ally, the organ of the church playing "God Save the Queen" at the time. Strange and wenderful, indeed! It seems as if in this tribute of respect to a departed dead foe old enmittes and rivalries were wiped out, and the seal of Heaven placed upon that hond of unity which is now happily established between the two great and powerful nations. May Heaven bless and prosper it.

John Lawson Johnstone of Kingwood, Kent, the principal director of a well-known and largely advertised company, who turns out to be the purchaser of the Frince of Wales's famous racing cutter Britannia, will be received with open arms in yachting circles. In fact, it is runnored that the Prince sold the yacht on the express condition that the purchaser should not race her, and that she is to be rigged as a cruiser. To an interviewer, Mr. Johnstone said:

I do not feel at liberty to state the sum I paid for her. I may tell you, however, that I did not get her cheap. I paid a very substantial sum, but should not care to run the risk of incurring His Royal Highnese's displeasure by making it public.

Mr. Johnstone also told the interviewer how he had recently paid 618 for a hed mon which Prince had resently paid 650 for a hed upon which Prince Charles slept before the battle of Culioden. This he offered to present to Queen Victoria, who repiled that only on one or two occasions had she acpiled that only on one or two occasions had she accepted presents from a commons, and she did not see her way to accept the led. "However, it was a very pleasant letter, very pleasant," said Mr. Johnstone, who alled that the Duke of Argyll had promised to come and sleep in the led as soon as the matter could be arranged. Lieutenant Hambrough, who was connected with a leading banking-house of London and New-York, and who was heir to a large estate upon coming of age, was discovered dead, with gunshot wounds in the back of the head, in the preserves of an estate in Scotland which Monson, the young man's tutor, had left London to purchase for the latter. It developed that the pellets which killed the Lieutenant were from Monson's gun, and the tutor explained that after they had left the house at Ardiamont to go shooting they had exchanged guns. The tutor was eventually arrested and tried for murder, as it was shown that the Murual Life Insurance Company of New York, a short time pravious to Hambrough's death, issued to Monson two policies for $6,000 each upon the Lieutenant's life, in which insurance Mrs. Monson was the beneficiary. It was also demonstrated that Monson negotiated with other companies for insurance, with Mrs. Monson as beneficiary, upon the life of Lieutenant Hambrough, the whole amount aggregating more than $50,000. collected the money, hence, it was said, his making Mrs. Monson the beneficiary. Although there was already 190,000 insurance on Hambrough's life at the time of his death, the defence of Monson made a point in his favor by pointing out the uncompleted nature of some of the insurance policies, holding that if the insurance money was the motive of the crime the murder would have been delayed until all the papers were in order. On the other hand, while that if the insurance money was the motive of the crime the murder would have been delayed until all the papers were in order. On the other hand, while it was at first helieved that Hambrough might have accidentally killed himself by tripping and exploding his gun as he felt, it was demonstrated that a tree north the deadly charge just about the height of a man's head from the ground. The indications were that the man who fired the shot which killed Hambrough stood about thirty paces away, as the hair on the back of the deceased's head about the wound had not been singed, as it would most likely have been had he tripped and shot himself with the muzzie of his gun class to his head. But, as Scotch juries are preverbially cautious, the verdict of 'not proven' set Monson at liberty.

A mysterious individual known by a number of names, including those of Edward Scott and Edward Sweeney, the engineer of Hambrough's yacht, and also a game-keeper at Ardiamont, disappeared on the day of the murder, and was hunted for by the polices for a long time afterward, as being likely to possess knowledge of the tragedy. After considerable investigation of more or less misleading clews as to his whereabouts and real identity, a series of articles said to have been written by Scott were published in April, 1894, just after Scott had surrendered himself to the police and had been disturendered himself to the police and had been disturbed because the warrant against him had expired, completely exculpating Scott and Monson from any connection with Hambrough's death.

tributions of the two countries—the Austrian Government maintaining that the Hungarian contribution should be increased—and declaring that the existing currency relations and customs union must be maintained owing to foreign treaties, he said that, as an old member of the Reichsrath, he should deeply deplore the result if political circumstances compelled the Government to enforce a compromise by other than Parliamentary means; that there were circumstances, he declared, which were materially stronger than all forms. In conclusion, he said:

"Do not force the Government—I do not mean the Government of Count Badeni, but the Government generally—in such a way that it will be compelled to settle the question without the ald of

DRUGGED OR ADULTERATED COFFEE is being sold by a hungry horde of counterfeiters and put upon an unsuspecting public as

The original cereal coffee. Any so-called cereal coffee, with a coffee flavor, sold in imitation of Postum. is drugged or adulterated. The ingredients are injurious to the human stomach. Postum is the ONLY CEREAL COFFEE WITH A COFFEE FLAVOR THAT IS PURE AND HARMLESS.

The analysis of Postum is in the hands of the leading Physicians and the Food Commissioners of the different States. Not one of the makers of cereal coffee with a coffee taste dare make public the ingredients of his concoction.

All genuine packages of Postum have red seals thereon, and the words "It makes red blood." These red seals guarantee absolute purity. Boil Postum fifteen minutes after boiling commences and it's delicious.
